

Dear board members of the ICPI,

Attending the CAP 2008 Resident's Forum was a worthwhile experience -- even as a fourth year medical student. Aside from the obvious opportunity to network with residents from across the country and learn about the differences between programs, attending the forum granted me a vision of the direction the field of pathology is heading, and what topics are most important to pathologists and residents. It was easy for me to come away from the meeting energized to be an active participant in future meetings, and a desire to become involved in the many CAP committees. I was excited to learn about all the opportunities available to enrich the pathology training experience, and even to travel abroad with programs like Pathologists Overseas -- who are working in Ghana to establish labs, read slides, and train staff. It is unfortunate that so few residents are able to attend such a worthwhile meeting, and it is my hope to continue to attend as often as possible, and to be an active participant in the future direction of the field of pathology.

Thank You,
